My face, your face, millions of faces in morning's mirrors, each one yawning to life, crescendoing into our day: pencil-yellow school buses, the rhythm of traffic lights, fruit stands: apples, limes, and oranges arrayed like rainbows. begging our praise. Silver trucks heavy with oil or paper—.

Poem For The Day Two by Retta Bowen - Goodreads

One day you'll know how it feels To have your blue skies turn to rain. One day you'll dream of only her, But she'll be dreaming of someone else. One day she'll feel as if she's in heaven, And you'll be feeling as if you're in hell. One day you're gonna cry for her The way she did for you. One day you're going to miss her, But she'll be loving someone new.

One day the patterned carpet, the folding chairs, the woman in the blue suit by the door examining her split ends, all of it will go on without me. I'll have disappeared, as easily as a coin under lake water, and few to notice the difference. —a coin dropping into the darkening—. and West 4th Street, the sesame noodles that taste like too much peanut butter.

Bing: Poem For The Day One

More and more I find myself hiding the way I feel for you. You are a desire.... A desire that I want to be fulfilled, yet glowing and alight, A desire that I want to burn in my heart each night. You are a dream.... A dream that entered my heart without any warning, A dream that I want to wake up with each morning.
